New Trips—Old Favorites

☞ Dorado - We've got some great new trips. See our article about this spring's upcoming dorado exploratory. We're entering the enormous Brazilian Pantanal in search of the golden battler.

☞ Peacock Bass - We've got some new peacock bass trips as well. How about a slow paced houseboat trip in the hidden lakes of the Rio Branco. Unfished, uncrowded and unknown to outsiders. How about a Thanksgiving tour of two luxury lodges on the Xeriuini. See the articles in this issue for more info.

☞ Old Favorites - We're going back to the Unini in November. We have spaces available during two weeks on this giant fish river in what promises to be the best part of the season.

On The Horizon

We're heading into Indian territory in the northern fringe of the Amazon. Having received preliminary permission from the Brazilian government, we're already starting to plan an exploratory trip into Yanomani lands next year. It could be very interesting PR

In Search of "El Dorado"

For over two hundred years after Columbus found the New World, brave, gold-crazed explorers searched for "El Dorado", the fabled city of gold hidden deep in South America's wild jungles.

For a somewhat shorter time (3 years now), another group, less brave, but just as crazed (although for fish) has been searching for an "El Dorado" of a scallier kind.

This dorado is pure fishing gold. Salminus maxillosus, the South American freshwater dorado. An exceptionally strong swimmer and jumper, dorado typically range in size from 5 to 10 pounds, although twenty pound trophies can be common at the right time and place. While the current IGFA all-tackle record is 51 pounds, giants of up to 70 pounds have been caught in nets. Their intense, almost radiant, golden color is marked with holographic black horizontal stripes. This patterning, coupled with their powerful jaws and razor sharp teeth have earned the dorado the sobriquet "River Tiger" in South America.

Once fooled with a bait, their arm-wrenching strike is a testament to their aggressiveness and ferocity. As soon as an angler sets the hook, these wild leapers explode out of the water in a series of outrageous jumps, truly making them an angler's "El Dorado".

As desirable a fish as they are, in recent years, dorado fishing in South America has become a far less desirable proposition than our consistently dependable peacock bass and payara trips. Over-fishing, economic unrest and poisoned rivers have made formerly pristine fisheries in Argentina and Bolivia unacceptable options for most American sportfishermen. Many agents and operators, in a struggle to find fish for a clientele that increasingly yearns to get its hooks into the spectacular fighting dorado, are settling for extremely unattractive areas featuring giant dams and highly populated and developed shorelines.

That's simply not acceptable for us and our clientele, so we stopped offering dorado trips until we could find a safe, productive, attractive and exciting alternative to the choices that were available. Finally, after three years of searching, we've found an option we can love in Brazil's giant Pantanal marshland.

In a whirlwind, tour of the Pantanal, our advance team of Nicky Guedes, Wellington Melo and Paul Reiss, accompanied by Jonny Miles and Dusan Smetana of Field and Stream magazine (look for the article in December's issue), explored four rivers and their marshy edges. We searched for points of entry, fishable structure, lines of support and scientific data on fish populations, migratory patterns and ambient conditions. Piece by piece we found what we needed. We've weighed our options, considered the variables and now we're excited to announce that we're going forward with a full-scale, three week exploratory expedition next spring ... and we're inviting our clients to join us.

Planned '2004 Dorado Exploratory Trip Schedule
Please Note - Dates may be modified with new data input.	Departs	Returns	Openings
Group 1	April 20, 2004	April 29, 2004	- open -
Group 2	April 27, 2004	May 6, 2004	- open -
Group 3	May 4, 2004	May 11, 2004	- open -

We'll be working on the trip's final logistics as this issue reaches you. We expect to have our team back into the Pantanal by August to further hone our plans and prepare our operational resources to ensure a successful expedition.

Our goal for April's exploratory is to work our way through Brazil's great swamp as the big breeder dorado leave their spawning grounds, hungry and accessible in small river headwaters. We will use this exploratory to map and understand the region's fishery and fishing characteristics. Based on research data from the Brazilian government and recent scientific assays, we've developed a plan of exploration that will help us to locate the region's optimal dorado habitat. We expect to be very mobile, using either simple camps or a houseboat operation.

Of necessity, this trip will be limited in the number of anglers that can be supported. We plan on only 3 groups of six to eight anglers per group. This will be an exploratory journey in every sense of the term. As was the case in our previous exploration of the Urariquera river, anglers should be prepared for flexible daily schedules, with camp or boat movements occurring routinely. We have a tremendous amount of water to cover and we plan to be nimble and flexible in our pursuit of the dorado. Facilities will most likely be basic and the food will be simple, but hearty.

Exploratory Itinerary

Please note - This itinerary may vary as trip logistics are finalized.

Saturday Depart U.S. to Sao Paulo, Brazil. Board a domestic flight to Campo Grande, Mato Grosso do Sul. Meet your exploratory group members and overnight in Campo Grande.

Sunday Early AM, board a charter to flight or land rover to the edge of the Pantanal, from where you'll be transferred to our camp or houseboat facility. Depending on where camp is located, arrive sometime between late morning and early afternoon. Relax and unwind or set up your gear and get in some fishing.

Monday through Saturday Six days of fishing. Your angling day begins with a 5:30 AM wake up call. Breakfast is at 6:00 AM. Your guide is ready to depart at first light, although you can remain in camp at your leisure. Relax for an hour at lunchtime each day. Return to camp before dusk for appetizers and drinks while we compare each others findings, followed by a Pantanal dinner.

Sunday Early Sunday morning, transfer back to the edge of the marsh and then to Campo Grande. Board a domestic flight to Sao Paulo and return to the U.S. via an international flight.

In addition to the golden dorado, we hope to successfully encounter giant suribim (flathead catfish) up to 80 pounds, pacu or pirapitinga (Piaractus), into the 20 pound class and piraputanga, a large brycon that fights like a psychotic trout as well as several other Pantanal species (see below).

If you seek adventure and exploration .. if you're crazed for scaly, finned gold .. then this is a trip for you. We'll keep pricing low, in the $2700 to $2900 range, in line with the exploratory nature of the trip. Join us this April and delve into one of the world's most fascinating environments in pursuit of "El Dorado". For more information or to reserve your place, call, toll-free, 866 832-2987 or 866 431-1668.

Client Photos - Trophies - Winter '2004

The photos below were taken on our recent exploratory trip to the Pantanal.

Wildlife in the Pantanal.

Many Amazon basin and Amazon Fringe locations, although home to some of the most incredible biodiversity on the planet, are difficult locales in which to successfully sight and photograph wildlife. Not so the Pantanal. This big, flat swamp makes line of sight go on forever and without the giant trees and dense cover of some rainforest locales, anglers can find spectacular birds and imposing large animals in plain sight. If you're coming to the Pantanal, make sure to pack your cameras along with your fishing tackle.

Capybara and Jabiru roam the marsh

Getting there was tough. We used Toyota Land Cruisers over rough cattle land to reach the Pantanal's edge. Once there, however, we were rewarded with this beautiful black-water river

A New Season is on the Way

Some changes, some additions, but the same great service and awesome fighting fish

Anglers, start sorting your lures, check out your rods and reels, and take an inventory of your supplies. Yes, its still summer now but in a few short months, as fall approaches, the waters of the Amazon River basin will begin to recede and the mighty peacock bass, the giant catfish and the prehistoric payara will be waiting for you. We have been preparing throughout the winter and spring for the upcoming season. We are very excited about some of our program improvements and additions and we anticipate another great season of trips for our anglers. Although we had to deal with an unusual rainfall pattern last year we were able to position our camps at the best possible sites, since we have the advantage of mobility and access to numerous locations throughout the region. All of our clients enjoyed the best possible fishing in Brazil despite the unpredictable weather.

Our trips have been filling up at an extraordinary pace this year, faster than we had expected. We had many clients who booked days after returning from their trips with us last year, which prompted us to add a number of new weeks to our schedule this year. We have added two extra weeks to our fall Amazon Angel yacht trip and have expanded our operation at the Rio Urariquera to handle the amazing response that we received from our clients who thoroughly enjoyed the multi-species angling offered at that site. This year we have also scheduled two weeks on the Xeriuini River, coinciding with the Thanksgiving season in November. In the past we had never had a heavy response for trips during that holiday period, but we have had many requests from international anglers so we decided to open up those weeks at a special discounted rate.

If you've booked a trip with us for this coming season, your job is basically done, but ours is just beginning. Once you've confirmed your booking, our staff goes to work arranging all of the components that will make your journey to the Amazon as smooth and enjoyable as possible. It begins with the reservation package that is assembled for each angler, specific to his chosen fishing destination. Each traveler receives a Pre-trip Questionnaire to fill out and return to our offices. This document helps us prepare for your trip and enables our staff in Brazil to make you as comfortable as possible.

Also included in the reservation package is a pre-trip information booklet, and pre-trip checklist, containing valuable information to help you prepare. Thoroughly reading this information will assure that you have the right gear for your trip, and will give you background as to what to expect when you reach your camp. We also include an optional trip insurance package, which enables travelers to purchase partial or complete travel insurance packages from a major carrier.

Our job is still not done. Approximately three months prior to your departure, you'll receive our Ticketing and Visa Package, including the documentation necessary, to secure your visa (and a passport, if needed) in a timely, economical and hassle free manner. To make this process as easy and efficient as possible, we have partnered with Zierer Visa Service, a professional visa and document processing organization. They provide extremely quick turn around, flawless handling and they're sensitive to the needs of Acute Angling's clientele.

This year we have included a few extra items in our visa package mailing. You will find two Acute Angling luggage tags for your check-in bags and our newly designed Acute Angling hat...wear it with pride.

We will once again be building our trip itineraries around the schedule of Lloyd Aereo Boliviano Airlines (LAB), the only airline flying direct from the U.S. to Manaus, Brazil. Their scheduled flights have changed slightly this coming season. Although the departure from Miami to Manaus remains roughly the same, sliding back about an hour, the return has changed significantly. Beginning in early October their flights from Manaus to Miami will be departing at 12:00 noon and will arrive in Miami at 5:00 PM. This change in schedule means that our anglers will remain in Manaus overnight after returning from the jungle. Acute Angling has arranged for our clients to stay at the Hotel Tropical, the finest hotel in the city, at our expense. After roughing it in the jungle and straining your muscles against mighty peacock bass, a day of comfort and pampering is not a bad thing. Due to its close proximity to the airport it will be a convenient and relaxing night before the next day's flight home.

If you wish to upgrade your flight to business class please contact Garry Reiss toll free at (866) 431-1668 as soon as possible to receive a quote and to secure the change to your ticket.

LAB has indicated that they anticipate full flights this coming season so please do not delay if you wish to upgrade.

As the time for our upcoming trips draws near, as always, we are available to answer your questions, make suggestions or help you with your tackle questions. Don't forget to visit our Tackle-Box.net website for comprehensive tackle outfits designed for our fishing destinations. Maybe you'll be the one who breaks the record this year. Have a great fishing season. Garry Reiss

Angler's Math: New Water = Better Fishing Less Pressure

The more popular and the more accepted Peacock bass fishing becomes, the more difficult it is to find pristine, untouched fisheries. In many areas, our fantastic sport has unfortunately fallen into an increasingly formulaic pattern. The big operators crowd into the well-known and well-publicized locales and pound the same waters, week after week, with huge groups of uninitiated and unsuspecting anglers. With great optimism and expectations, they whip the water to a froth with surface plugs and fly lines. And year after year, they catch fewer, smaller and ever more cautious fish in these overcrowded and overused areas. This is why we are constantly searching for new waters, new means of access and ever more isolated fisheries. It's our goal to keep the trips we offer fresh, new and productive. Here are two new ways to catch big numbers of big fish.

New Water - Hidden Lakes of the Rio Branco

Fish where no one else has fished before. Peacocks that have never seen a lure will attack without hesitation.

Usually we have to travel huge distances to more and more remote areas to encounter new water, but sometimes, an untouched fishery sits, unrecognized, right under our noses. This is the case with the Rio Branco. "What!?", those of you in the know exclaim, "There's no peacock fishery in that giant white water tributary!" Well, you're right and you're wrong. The river itself does not provide a satisfactory peacock fishery because it's water characteristics are anathema to peacock fishing, however, hidden within its complex basin is a chain of clear, black-water, landlocked lakes - chock full of peacock bass. As the dry season arrives and the waters recede, this hidden fishery becomes separated from the river and totally inaccessible. Now there's a way to get there.

Just a shade below the equator, this chain of approximately 15 large, interconnected lakes holds the same giant strain of Cichla temensis found in its more famous nearby neighbors, such as the Tapera, the Xeriuini and the Agua Boa. This upcoming season, for the first time, the Rio Branco's hidden lakes will play host to a small scale fishing operation designed to offer a comfortable mechanism for accessing this fresh and completely unpressured fishery.

Holding up to 6 anglers, a small houseboat will serve as a very comfortable and civilized base camp, centrally located within the chain of Rio Branco Lakes.

The houseboat offers pleasant accommodations, air conditioning, bathrooms with full showers, excellent food and an always open bar. The lakes, discovered from the air and initially explored from a float plane hold large numbers of peacocks including specimens well into the 20 pound class.

Offered for a two week period only, this unique trip will be available the weeks of January 9th and January 16th, 2005. The trip will cost $2600 for six full days of fishing with all domestic charters and transfers included.

Less Pressure - Fish Your Way Up An Entire River

Spread out over a giant area in a highly productive fishery. Low angler density minimizes fishing pressure.

Usually this is impossible in a recognized, high productivity fishery, but this year we're taking advantage of a two week gap caused by a holiday schedule to create a unique, new Thanksgiving trip package.

Clear, black water makes for great sport on both fly and conventional tackle.

Acute Angling, in cooperation with Amazon Peacock Bass Fishing Adventures, has reserved the entire, Xeriuini River for two full weeks. This beautiful clear, black water river is home to two of the Amazon's most comfortable and well operated luxury lodges. We're going to reserve both lodges to be used by a single group of only eight anglers. Macaroca, located in the river's central region, is surrounded by giant lagoons and complex floodplain structure, while Posao, located in the river's headwaters, provides crystal clear sandy lagoons and small water fishing situations. Arrive at Macaroca Lodge on Thursday morning, settle in and sample the fishing. Explore the lower and central river's big lagoons and tangle with electrifying trophy peacocks for the next three days. On Sunday morning, pack your lunch and fish your way upriver.

Enjoy the beauty and productivity of rarely visited central river sections and arrive at Posao in time for a delicious, well-earned dinner. Your bags will already be waiting in Posao's comfortable, air-conditioned cabins. Three more exciting fishing days await you in Posao's beautiful, fish laden waters. You will have fished the entire river! Your charter will pick you up on Thursday morning to begin your journey home.

This unique itinerary provides you with the best of both worlds. The comfort, security and luxury of an air-conditioned, ground-based lodge with all of the amenities, but with the expanded access normally only found on a rough and tumble mobile exploratory camping trip. The Xeriuini's crystal clear black water provides great fishing for both fly and conventional tackle, with fish over 22 lbs., a high percentage of large fish and daily catches ranging from 15 to 30 peacocks per angler! The gorgeous white sand beaches serve to further accentuate the region's natural beauty.

Enjoy Thanksgiving in the Amazon, fish the watershed of two great lodges, and enjoy both for almost $1000 less than the price of either one! The trip will cost $2500 for six full days of fishing—with all domestic charters and transfers included.
